Botulinum toxin A for parapharyngeal-level fibrosis: a meta-analysis of randomized controlled trials. We performed a systematic review of currently available data to assess the effectiveness and safety of botulinum toxin A for parapharyngeal-level fibrosis. English literature was searched using MEDLINE and Cochrane Central Register of Controlled Trials, and the meta-analysis was performed using RevMan software, Version 5.1. Quantitative data analysis showed that the post-treatment thickness of the parapharyngeal-level scar was significantly reduced after treatment with botulinum toxin A. Pain relief was also found for fibrosis of the parapharyngeal-level scar. However, the pooled data for the group treated with botulinum toxin A showed some heterogeneity. Our meta-analysis also showed that botulinum toxin A is associated with higher costs and shorter duration of pain relief than placebo.Q: SQL order by query with multiple WHERE clauses I am running into an SQL query that I can't seem to figure out. The situation is that I have a method that runs on a device that will send 2 values to an SQL database. The database design provides a unique composite key that would allow me to retrieve results by WHERE clauses on a subset of columns but also allows me to sort the results by a subset of columns as well. The issue is that when I run the query using ORDER BY it's sorted by the combination of the 2 columns in the WHERE clauses rather than sorting by each one individually which is part of the composite key. Here is my specific method: public long[] Method() { var result = _dbContext.db.Table().Where(x => x.SomeProperty == SomeValue).Where(x => SomeOtherProperty == SomeValue).OrderBy(x => x.SomeOtherProperty).ToArray(); //result comes out as:.OrderBy(x => x.SomeProperty).ToArray(); var result2 = _dbContext.db.Table().Where(x => x.SomeProperty == SomeValue).Where(x => SomeOtherProperty == SomeValue).OrderBy(x => x.SomeOtherProperty).ToArray(); //result comes out as:.

China is set to overtake the United States and Japan as the world's largest economy by 2027, according to a report by HSBC released on Monday. In its latest World in 2020 report, HSBC projects that China will account for 24% of global economic output in 2027, against 25% this year. HSBC puts China's overall economic output at $15.7 trillion and the US' at $15 trillion in 2027. Hong Kong's 21st Century Business Magazine (21CBM) reported on Monday that the HSBC report highlights a "three way" battle for the top spot between China, the US and Japan. China's economic growth, meanwhile, is projected to be 6.5% in 2020, against 6.1% this year. That equates to a US$13.6 trillion economy, against US$13 trillion. Japan comes in behind at 9.8% growth, according to the report, while the eurozone remains at 1.9% and is Europe's weakest growth region. HSBC said the forecast for China's economy "remains up in the air", as the central bank is not expected to follow through with its controversial monetary policy shift in February. "We find continued uncertainty over the timing of further interest-rate rises is a key uncertainty," HSBC said. "The risks of rebalancing the economy and further capital controls also remain." The aim of this study was to investigate the efficacy and safety of LY411575, a novel oral inhibitor of H1 receptor (H1-R) expression, in children with acute otitis media (AOM). This randomized, double-blind, placebo controlled phase II study was performed in infants and children aged 6 months to 5 years with AOM. Patients received LY411575 4mg/kg (maximum daily dose of 200mg) or placebo twice daily for 5 days. The primary outcome was the rate of clinical cure (e.g. resolution of ear discharge and pain/redness without the need for rescue therapy [e.g. tympanocentesis, antibiotics, or surgery]) after 5 days of therapy. Successful clinical cure was achieved in 12.1% of the LY411575 group.
